

Abstract

The present invention relates to a method for operating an internal combustion engine with oil lubrication and electronic fuel injection, characterized by the fact that a flow of fuel mass (m_{kp_ausg}) evaporating out of the oil is determined and taken into account in the calculation of the injected-fuel quantity (rk_{ev}).

(Figure 1)